ABOUT THE SEMINAR

The rise of China and its influence in India's neighborhood is a concern and a challenge for New Delhi. This tectonic global shift in international relations should also be seen as an opportunity for India as it envisions its position in 2047 i.e. as it celebrates its 100th year of independence. The seminar India@2047 aims to look into the vision India by debating and discussing how best India can be future-ready by reengineering the institutional expertise in areas of agriculture, commerce, infrastructure, industry, urban landscape, security & defense, technology and governance with a road map for 'India's space in the world in 2047'. This makes India's policy makers to keep twisting India's foreign policy with the vision of 2047 when the world will have bigger challenges of climate, health, technology, regional conflicts and new dimensions of regional strength etc.

OBJECTIVES OF THE SEMINAR

Today's challenges offer India's appearance as an active and responsible global leader which is assumed to be on height by 2047. While critiquing and analyzing the present day foreign relations this national seminar will provide a platform of debate to fathom the abyss of avenues for India to be ready for the surrounding challenges by unpredictable neighbors or unfavorable global alliances. The discussions of experts will help in getting the significance of India's self-reliance in ammunition, border and maritime surveillance as an achievement to India's 2047 vision attempting to craft international fabric of relations more democratic and multilateral.

This seminar invites academia and intellectuals to contribute their views to the foreign policy of India@2047 with reference to the issues and paradigm in international relations.

The papers shall be broadly related to the following sub-themes:
