About the Workshop

Scientists make enormous contributions to the society they live in, and they all have an important story to tell. Successful communication requires strong scientific expertise and practical messaging skills to bridge the knowledge gap between researchers and diverse groups of beneficiaries. This workshop is designed to inculcate strong communication skills essential for networking, collaborating, educating, and succeeding in a career for students and scholars of sciences. The workshop aims to develop effective communications skills among PG students and PhD research scholars for facing interviews and presentations at various platforms that facilitates transferring their research outputs to the community.
